dIPFC activity causes consciousness – that this particular neural activity brings about, is responsible for the production of, consciousness. More generally, the reasoning is this: 1) The NCC correlates with consciousness; 2) The best explanation of this is that the NCC causes consciousness; therefore, plausibly, 3) The NCC causes consciousness.

Beyond mammals, this layerlike organization can also be identified in the brains of, for example, the common octopus and Drosophila, suggesting that a common functionality of information processing patterns may be represented in both artificial and biological neural networks (Shigeno, 2017).

Grid, Border, and Conjunctive Cells. There are three other additional neural correlates to spatial navigation that are outside the hippocampus proper: grid, border, and conjunctive cells. Grid cells fire in multiple locations in the environment forming a repeating hexagonal grid-like pattern.

Here we address the understanding of both desires and beliefs and the neural substrates involved in reasoning about them. Method Participants Twenty-four adults (mean age = 22 years; range = 18–39 years; 14 males and 10 females) participated in the study.

The neural correlates of consciousness (NCC) constitute the minimal set of neuronal events and mechanisms sufficient for a specific conscious percept. Neuroscientists use empirical approaches to discover neural correlates of subjective phenomena.
