Humanity like a garden to be cultivated with care, not for the use or misuse of a few, but in order to share its fruits with all for a decent life on earth. Yet Humanity and Nature are not on the same level. Humanity is the subject. Nature is the object to take care of. It is the responsibility of Hu-manity to keep Nature sustainable.

The end of the world is a state of being where the worries and problems of life no longer affect us. It can also be called enlightenment. The end of the world has been twisted into a physical event that can include the rapture, which is a means to escape the oppression of the world. In other words, humans are looking for the easy way out.

We need the humanities in order to understand why we need the wilderness. The sciences can tell us how to preserve the wilderness, and the social sciences can tell us how to mobilize the political opinion that is necessary to support the preservation. But only the humanities can tell us why we need the wilderness in the first place.
